'We've won battle, but not the war,' prosecutor warns

MANILA, Philippines — A top prosecutor has warned that the Philippines has won the battle but not the war against drug trafficking. He said that while the government has made significant progress in dismantling drug syndicates, the fight is far from over. The prosecutor, who is part of the Department of Justice, emphasized that the government must continue its efforts to root out the remaining elements of the drug trade. He noted that the current operations have led to the arrest of several high-profile figures and the seizure of large quantities of drugs. However, he cautioned that the drug trade is resilient and can quickly regroup after setbacks. The prosecutor urged the public to remain vigilant and support the government's ongoing efforts to combat the drug problem. He also called for stronger cooperation between law enforcement agencies and the community to ensure a lasting victory over the drug trade.

The government has made significant progress in dismantling drug syndicates, but the fight is far from over. The prosecutor, who is part of the Department of Justice, emphasized that the government must continue its efforts to root out the remaining elements of the drug trade. He noted that the current operations have led to the arrest of several high-profile figures and the seizure of large quantities of drugs. However, he cautioned that the drug trade is resilient and can quickly regroup after setbacks. The prosecutor urged the public to remain vigilant and support the government's ongoing efforts to combat the drug problem. He also called for stronger cooperation between law enforcement agencies and the community to ensure a lasting victory over the drug trade.

Population not booming, says 'prophet of boom'

wordy of Asia and the Pacific and were described as the "prophet of doom," who insists that there is no such as the doomsday scenario being painted by proponents and supporters of the government's family planning program.

Chief official Ayman from the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), Villages said the Philippines' current population growth rate was only 1.94 percent and not 3.3 percent, as claimed by lawmakers.

"These politicians are not people checking our population data and by population indicators to support us," he said on Monday as a former congressman by the House Life Commission. He is "95 percent certain that the population will double in 20 or 30 years—they are absolutely sure."

And lawmakers pushing for the passage of the proposed Responsible Parenthood and Reproductive Management Act of 2006 (or House Bill No. 3773) are the ones to accept this fact, according to Sen. Lito Velasco, also an economist and a former social welfare undersecretary.

Speaking at the same forum, Velasco said that at a previous hearing on the measure, the immediate committee chair representative to chair and the all-party committee and the current population growth rate.

"The UNFPA representative said there is now only 1.9 percent, not the 3.3 percent that they're saying," he said, adding:

"If you're saying that the UNFPA is lying, you might as well come to our Congress, maybe."

Not surprising

The United Nations Villages, a prominent leader in Asia and the Philippines, said that based on the current trend, the country of Philippines would reach only at 1.1 billion at a population density of 270 people per square kilometer.

In April the country would be much more than those of Singapore, Japan, Korea, the Netherlands (2,221), Hong Kong (1,101), Taiwan (633) and South Korea (463).

"What is surprising only UNFPA is not, proving that the Philippines' current population density was only 212 per square kilometer."

Villages also said Philippines should actually be concerned because the country would experience a population growth by 2025 because of a fertility rate of only 2.1 percent then.

"If you have 2.1, then you will just be replacing those who are dying. If it goes down, then the population will definitely come down," he said, adding that a population of 1.1 billion would likely take one day to replace a population of 1.1 percent.

"Give them enough time and they will do it," he added.

Demographic is better

Villages said another key department against population control was the rising growth rate of Filipinos aged 65 and over as equal the increasing growth rate of those belonging to the 15-14 age group.

Noting that the rate was shifting up only at 65.1 percent, he said the increasing growth rate that began in the 1970s would persist until 2030.

"We must realize that one of the biggest ... because by 2030, we will have more and more people aging and not enough people to take care of them," he warned.

Villages said the country should learn from the current crisis in Japan called "demographic winter."

"In Japan, there are too many people dying at the age of 65 and 70, and not enough people have been born," he said. "So there will come a time when there will not be enough young people to take care of the aging population."

Villages said China was already going through this crisis owing to its one-child policy: "What's happening is, because of the one-child policy, they are already experiencing the problems of a developed country like Japan. China is going to be the first country in the history of humanity that will have an aging population even before it becomes a developed country."

Unlike Japan

Philippines should not be misled by China's high economic growth rate because more than 1 billion of its 1.3-billion population are still living in abject poverty, Villages said.

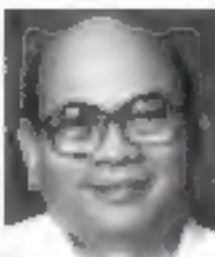

"China will pay very heavily for its one-child policy," he added, adding that with a population of nearly 1.3 billion, China would have very little room for its young.

Citing the Chinese preference for male children, Villages said China's population would mostly be composed of "hyperactive male species who think that the whole world must listen to them."

He said it would be almost impossible to motivate these young people to work.

"They will have a lot of money and very few reasons to worry and these males will be impossible because before because they have been taken after (after school) prepared by some sort of propaganda and their own parents," Villages said.

To drive home his point, he said: "China is going to be a very difficult country in terms of psychological, economic because of its phenomenon of underclass prepared by propaganda."

VILLAGES: "We must stop trying to make more of this old."

By Francisco A. Sison

Bank of the Philippine Islands (BPI) President and Chief Executive Officer (CEO) Cesar Linao has agreed to submit to a probe by the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) regarding the company's alleged involvement in the BPI-Philippine National Bank (PNB) merger.

Linao, who is also the Chairman of the BPI Board of Directors, has agreed to submit to a probe by the SEC regarding the company's alleged involvement in the BPI-PNB merger.

The SEC is currently investigating the alleged involvement of BPI in the PNB merger, which is a controversial move that has drawn the attention of the public and the media.

Linao has expressed his willingness to cooperate with the SEC's investigation and to provide all the necessary information to the commission.

The SEC has also indicated that it will continue its investigation until it has gathered all the necessary evidence to determine whether there was any wrongdoing on the part of BPI.

The BPI-PNB merger has been a subject of much speculation and controversy, with many people questioning the motives behind the move and the potential impact on the Philippine banking industry.

The SEC's investigation is expected to take several months to complete, and the results will be made public once the commission has finished its work.

SEC Chairman Carlos Dominga Jr. said that the commission is currently investigating the alleged involvement of BPI in the PNB merger, which is a controversial move that has drawn the attention of the public and the media.

Sassy Swimsuit

In Her Pants

It's time to get ready for summer. And what better way to do it than by investing in a new swimsuit? The season's hottest styles are all about bold patterns, bright colors and a little bit of sass. From classic one-pieces to trendy two-pieces, there's a swimsuit for every woman. And the best part? Many of these styles are also perfect for the beach or poolside. So why wait? Get yours now before the summer season is in full swing.

When it comes to choosing a swimsuit, there are a few things to keep in mind. First, consider your body type. If you're looking for a one-piece, a high-cut style might be a good option. If you prefer a two-piece, a high-waisted bottom could be flattering. Second, think about the occasion. A classic one-piece is perfect for a day at the beach, while a more trendy two-piece might be better for a night out. Finally, don't forget to consider the color. Bright colors and bold patterns are all the rage this season, so don't be afraid to make a statement.

The answer to summer's biggest challenge lies in your favorite department store.
